Out our way, everybody was put wise to all of the inside 'dope on the, "Great Transatlantic Flying Contest". We even had the local zoo orchestra to blaze the noise from the housetops.

Old Farmer Al rigs up a gas bag over his old flivver and takes the propeller from last years motor boat and soon has his "Elyer" ball ready.

In the thereabouts, and other neighboring closebyes, everything and everybody was flying sky-high. There soon was flying fish, sharks and such like all over the place.

It seems to be somewhere near the Azores or Africa that a flying sword fish flies along and punctures the old farmer's gas balloon. This sword fish had just tried out his sword on Bozo Cat's flying boat, and punctured his balloon tires. Well anyway the farmer loses his equilibrium and falls, he lands right in the boiling pot of a gang of hungry cannibals. He manages to scramble out and run away. We leave him running for dear life followed by a hungry mob. Aesop says: "While running around with cannibals don't get stuck for the dinner".
